"There is a new world coming upon us, and we have to acquaint ourselves with its ways and possibilities." The general recommendation seems to be that the English farmers most find their own way out of the difficulties that beset them. and either change the material of their product so as to evade the competition, or else abandon a soil that will no longer support them. Agricultural commissions may be useful in their way, but they cannot overcome nature nor shut England off

Swarn's mill started on the Silver King tailings on Wednesday. It is calculated to run 40 tons per day, but it will be long before we can see any apparent decrease in the enermous cars worked by the engine to and from the tailings. The machinery worked smoothly and there seems to be no reason why Mr Swain's herculean under taking should not be accomplished with profit to all parties concerned.
